

CLASSiC Lecture Objectives

1. By the end of this – Neonatal Emergencies Lecture, participant will be able to:
 - a. Relate the history of resuscitation.
 - b. Outline the sequence of care in the resuscitation of a newborn.
 - c. Describe the difference between the newly born and newborn, and the common reasons they may require or seek emergency care.
2. By the end of this – Respirology Emergencies lecture, participant will be able to:
 - a. Compare the anatomical and physiological differences between the adult and pediatric airway.
 - b. Distinguish respiratory distress from respiratory failure.
 - c. Describe clinical features, diagnosis and management of upper and lower airway obstruction and diseases of the lung.
3. By the end of this – Pediatric Trauma Management lecture, participants will be able to:
 - a. Describe unique anatomic and physiologic characteristics of the pediatric age group that affect response to injury and management.
 - b. Define concepts of the primary and secondary surveys.
 - c. Discuss management priorities based on life-threatening injuries identified in the primary survey.
 - d. Discuss the identification and initial treatment of life-threatening injuries to major organ systems.
 - e. Review relevant issues of injury prevention.